

The Bear, the Bee, and the Buzzing Tree

On a warm, sunny morning, a little bee named Bella buzzed happily through the air.

She had an important job to do—collect nectar and help her hive make honey!

High in a tree nearby hung a big, golden beehive. It was Bella's home, and inside, all the bees worked together, buzzing and building.

Not too far away, a fluffy brown bear named Benny wandered through the forest.

Sniff... sniff...

“What is that sweet smell?” he wondered.

Benny followed the scent until he reached the tree. He looked up and saw the hive.

“Oh my...” Benny whispered. “That looks like honey.”

Just as he took a step closer, Bella buzzed down in front of him.

“Hello there!” she said kindly. “This is our hive. We worked very hard to make our honey.”

Benny sat down and gave a small, polite smile.

“I didn't mean to bother anyone,” he said. “It just smells so good.”

Bella thought for a moment. Then she had an idea.

“If you promise to be gentle and not disturb our home,” she said, “we can share a tiny bit with you.”

Benny's eyes lit up. “I promise!”

So Bella flew up to the hive and came back with a small drop of golden honey. Benny tasted it and smiled from ear to ear.

“It's the sweetest thing I've ever had,” he said.

From that day on, Benny didn't try to take honey. Instead, he visited Bella and the hive just to say hello—and sometimes, if he was lucky, they shared a little treat.

And in the quiet forest, the buzzing tree became a place of friendship.

Buzz, buzz... and happily ever after.
